Chapter 1 by Iris26

Lily Baxter owns a flower shop next to the cozy cafe where Martin Allen works as a barista. Despite seeing Martin every morning and having pleasant chats with them when they go to the cafe to order coffee, Lily is too shy to tell Martin about the romantic feelings they've been harboring for them for the last few months.

Chapter 2 by SaintSayaka

It would be too awkward, Lily has convinced herself. And what if she did manage to talk to him, anyway? All of her relationships, platonic or otherwise, had come to one, glaring question, one that made or broke them on the spot - "Did you know that I'm transgender?"

She didn't think that she'd face much discrimination in liberal New York; she had been very lucky in that respect. But people tended to treat her differently afterwards, as if her gender was the core aspect of HER. And she couldn't stand seeing Martin go down that path, too.
